

I originally submitted the first chapter of this story, intending it to be a one-off transgender sex romp.

When I received ratings saying it felt like I'd posted an excerpt and asking for 'the rest of the story,' I was intrigued and started thinking about how I could tell the story. I've gone in a very different direction that I was expecting to go; creating a weird world in which to allow the Mistress, who has gained the name Isabelle, to begin her story. I've done four chapters so far and I know where I'm going for quite a way more. I still have to build the world away from this first city for a start!

The moral of this introduction apparently is: Feed my ego, get more story.

Please give me feedback and let me know what you think of the direction I'm taking this in.

Also: include in your comments if you realise where this is supposed to be set. I think I was being a bit too obvious, but I'll need feedback to work it out.

Thanks so much for the comments so far, especially KTC for your wall of text, very much appreciated.
